

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear abuse of their use of the airways. Access to public airways is a privilege, and media owners are strictly required to present unbiased reporting that serves the public interest. Unless this requirement is, in fact, strictly enforced, we might as well throw democracy out the window.

What can it matter if everyone can vote--if in fact only a handful of people can manipulate what the public are thinking?

This is a clear example of the dangers of large holders of media--rather than several small holders.

I am enraged that Sinclair can pull a stunt like this and still use the public airwaves free of charge! The FCC needs to tell Sinclair that if they follow through on this broadcast, their license to broadcast will be in serious jeopardy.

The stakes are extremely high here; Sinclair is striking at the very foundations of our democratic society.

Thank you.
